

About Lifespan

Lifespan, Rhode Island’s first health system, was founded in 1994 by Rhode Island Hospital and The Miriam Hospital. A not-for-profit comprehensive, integrated, academic health system with The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University, Lifespan’s present partners also include Rhode Island Hospital’s pediatric division, Hasbro Children’s Hospital; Bradley Hospital; Newport Hospital; Gateway Healthcare; and Lifespan Physician Group.

Rhode Island Hospital/Hasbro Children’s Hospital

Rhode Island Hospital is a private, not-for-profit, acute care hospital, with 719 beds. Founded in 1863, it is the largest hospital in Rhode Island, a nationally recognized research and academic medical center, serves as the Level 1 trauma center for southeastern New England, and provides a full range of diagnostic and therapeutic services, with particular expertise in cardiology, emergency medicine and trauma, neurosciences, oncology/radiation oncology, orthopedics, pediatrics, and surgery. Rhode Island Hospital is the principal teaching hospital of The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University. Hasbro Children’s Hospital, the pediatric division of Rhode Island Hospital, was built in 1994, and has the area’s only Pediatric Level I Trauma Center, pediatric intensive care unit and pediatric oncology and cardiac programs. The 87-bed Hasbro Children’s Hospital has separate emergency and surgical units designated for pediatric patients and operates specialty clinics treating children ranging in age from newborn to 18 years.

The Miriam Hospital

The Miriam Hospital is a private, not-for-profit, 247-bed, acute care general hospital founded by Rhode Island’s Jewish community in 1926. The Miriam Hospital provides a broad range of primary, secondary and tertiary medical and surgical services to adolescents and adults, with particular expertise in cardiology, oncology, orthopedics, gastroenterology, urology, immunology and infectious diseases.

The hospital also provides a full range of pathology and radiology services as well as psychiatric consultation/liaison services. The Miriam Hospital is a major teaching affiliate of The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University.

Emma Pendleton Bradley Hospital

Bradley Hospital, which opened in 1931, was the nation’s first psychiatric hospital devoted exclusively to children and adolescents. Bradley Hospital is a private, not-for-profit hospital with 70 beds and provides a continuum of inpatient, day treatment, residential, outpatient and special education services to young people from infancy to age 22. A major teaching affiliate of The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University, Bradley Hospital is licensed as an acute care hospital as well as a fully certified special education school. The Bradley School enrolls students at five Rhode Island locations: Cumberland, Providence, Portsmouth and South County, as well as in the New London region of Connecticut.

Newport Hospital

Newport Hospital is a private, not-for-profit, acute care hospital founded in 1873. The hospital has 129 beds and offers a wide range of healthcare services, including diagnostic imaging and testing, the Noreen Stonor Drexel Birthing Center, an inpatient mental health program, occupational health services, the Vanderbilt Rehabilitation Center, and community based primary care offices. Newport Hospital has state-of-the-art surgical facilities and cardiopulmonary services along with an emergency department that features private examining rooms, a trauma room, cardiac rooms, a fracture room and a radiology suite.

Gateway Healthcare

Gateway Healthcare was established in 1995 as a mental health center for residents of northern and central Rhode Island. Gateway has grown to include several locations across Rhode Island. Gateway's size and statewide reach set it apart from other community-based mental health and substance abuse organizations, providing free care each year to those in need. Gateway and its affiliates reach more than 25,000 Rhode Islanders each year through residential, outpatient and community-based programs.

Lifespan Physician Group

Lifespan Physician Group (LPG) is the largest multispecialty practice in Rhode Island. Founded in 2012, its growing network of more than 820 providers offers services that encompass primary care, psychiatry and behavioral health, women's medicine, and urgent care. It also offers specialty services including cardiology, gastroenterology, and ophthalmology.

Additionally, LPG's continuum of care guarantees access to specialty services and clinical care across the Lifespan health system. LPG teams provide care ranging from basic needs to the most advanced treatments.

Coastal Medical

Coastal Medical, a top-performing and highly regarded primary care practice led by Dr. Alan Kurose, joined Lifespan in 2021. Coastal Medical brings 20 locations in Rhode Island and 125 clinicians, including physicians, pharmacists, advanced care nurses, physician assistants, and technologists. Widely known as the bedrock of healthcare, primary care is essential to overall health for patients of all ages, and by merging with Coastal Medical Lifespan has increased access to primary care during a time when the need is great. Coastal boasts a national model for primary care, complementing Lifespan's outstanding specialty care.
